

ACADEMICIAN

WILLIAM SARYAN

Doctor of Technical Sciences, deputy chief engineer in Federal State Unitary Enterprise Radio Research and Development Institute (FSUE NIIR)

William K. Saryan is State Prize of Russia winner, has 2 prizes of the Russian Government in science and technology. Author of more than 200 scientific papers and 47 inventions and patents.

He has studied at Moscow Electrotechnical Institute of Communications (today Moscow Technical University of Communications and Informatics) and the Department of Engineering Physics of MSU.

He worked in NIIR from 1965 to 1991. During 1992 to 2004 he was the Vice-president of TV-Inform (system of circular-address delivery of digital information in TV signal). Since 2004 he is working in NIIR as deputy chief engineer.

Dr. W.K. Saryan is the Head of System Projects in the field of digital broadcasting (Association of Broadcasting Equipment Manufacturers and Developers ARPAT), participates in the work of Study Group 13 International Telecommunication Union SG13 ITU-T.

Dr. W.K. Saryan is professor at the Moscow Institute of Physics and Technology (State University) and the Moscow Technical University of Communications and Informatics. He gives lectures on the theory of man-machine interaction and computer systems in the information communications environment, directs the work of undergraduates and postgraduates.

Area of scientific interest of Dr. Saryan includes the theory of information management networks, the theory of ICT services, development of the model of limitations of the development of information and communication technologies, development of customized management in emergency situations, etc.

28 Dec. 2011 Dr. W.K. Saryan was elected a foreign academician of the National Academy of Sciences of Armenia.