possessing a sort of language of its own of English words spoken in a foreign language and in which it is impossible to distinguish the different words and meanings of the English words used in the same language.
The English language has up to this point been so much simplified that it is now almost impossible to understand it without some knowledge of the original language of the people who speak it.
This is the reason why it is so difficult to learn the English language, and it is also the reason why it is so difficult to learn the English language.
